

IXL Center congratulates Hult International Business School for being part of the Financial Times 100 Top Business Schools in 2010

CAMBRIDGE, MA, January 25, 2010 – IXL Center congratulates Hult International Business School for being part of the Financial Times' Top 100 Global MBA rankings in 2010.

Hult International Business School ranked 94th in this year's Financial Times global rankings of MBA programs, released today, up three spots from last year's ranking. Jointly sharing the top spot last year with University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School, London Business School this year gets the top spot. Hult is also top-ranked school in the international business beating out IMD, Manchester Business School, University of Southern California's Marshall School and London Business School.

Top for international business
1	Thunderbird School of Global Management
2	University of South Carolina: Moore
3	Georgetown University: McDonough
4	Insead
5	George Washington University
6	Hult International Business School
7	IMD
8	Manchester Business School
9	University of Southern California: Marshall
10	London Business School

Hult's 2010 Ranking also include:

5th best MBA program in the world in international mobility

54th best business school in US

25th best business school in Europe

"This is one of the most highly regarded rankings because it is based on the success of the alumni in the workplace. The ranking combines a number of measures including salary increase and career progress, the data for which is all supplied by the alumni themselves. The School's inclusion in this ranking of the world's top business schools reflects its competitiveness on all of these dimensions." – Hult International Business School

With campuses in Boston, San Francisco, London, Dubai and Shanghai, Hult is the only business school to fully immerse students in each of the world's key economies through its unique global rotation program. Additionally, it boasts a truly international student body – 80 nationalities.
